Isaac Hopper Scrapbook

Biography of Isaac A. Hopper (1851-1912):

Isaac Abram Hopper was born on May 30, 1851 in Harlem near Macomb's Dam, in the neighborhood where he grew up and lived his entire life. His father Abraham Isaac Hopper and his grandfather Isaak Abram Hopper were both builders and he learned the trade of bricklaying and plastering by helping them with cellar walls and chimneys (the only construction Harlem required, since the neighborhood was primarily constructed out of wood). Isaac was educated in the public schools and the College of the City of New York, and when he was 15 years old, he went to New Jersey to start his own activities.

He returned to New York in 1875 because the death of his father and obtained his first real contract, a little structure in the Bronx. In the hundreds of acres of Harlem, where few brick houses were still standing, Hopper found his opportunity for success and rapidly became one of the most important and known builders in New York City [for a list and a more extended description of this aspect I refer to the specific paragraph].

In 1893 he joined Tammany Hall, becoming a new member during a ceremony with other candidates on December 28. His entire social life was spent among the Democratic Clubs of Harlem (like the "Sagamore Club", "Harlem Democratic Club", "Occidental Club", "Lexington Club" and "Massasoit Club") and he used to take part in the assemblies, was a guest of meetings in the parloirs and fumoirs, participated in gala dinners and night-long parties, summer picnics in Central Park and theater shows. He was also active in builders' arbitration and unionism and one of the front-men of the "Builders' and Trades' Exchange."

He was one of the most prominent men in Harlem and after several years in the municipal Board of Education (expressing democratic ideas for a Common School System Reform) he decided to run as a candidate for the Tammany Hall Primaries in the 31st district, winning a hard fight against the former judge Charles Welde. He kept the office till 1904, when he was chosen by Mayor George B. McClellan as the new Superintendent of Buildings Bureau, appointed to inspect and control the buildings in New York City. He tried to reform the office organization and the inspection's system, he promulgated a bill about safety systems in the elevators, and he stopped building construction without structural and legal guarantees. Public opinion turned against him when he was charged with complicity and favoritism with the Pratt Company, clashed with the plumber's union, and was blamed for the disastrous collapse of the Darlington Hotel and other buildings. After a humiliating accusation involving a young actress he quit his political career and retired in 1905.

Besides the intense career of a builder, Isaac Hopper was also very active in different businesses, He was the Director of the "Twelfth Ward Saving Banks" (then "Empire City Savings Bank"); President of "Excelsior Terra Cotta Company", the only furniture finishing company operative in New York; Vice-president of "U.S. Mortar Supply and Co."; member of the Board of Directors of the "Ferry Lee Ferry Company" between Manhattan and New Jersey, and of the newspaper "The Harlem Reporter" (that caused him a lot of impeachment problems in 1905).

He worked very hard on his beloved winter residency in Orlando, Florida, "The Ripples" on Lake Sue, where he cultivated pineapples and oranges, covered with a modern system of canvassing able to keep the fruit trees warm during the cold season. His love for this place is clearly shown in the short song he wrote: "The everglades of Florida" (CHA-IH-199).

About his private life we know only few and concise stories from this scrapbook and from the Hopper's Family Tree (CHA-IH-FT). His first wife was Margaret Duncan Hopper (who died on September 21, 1910), and his second wife, with whom he married just a few months before his death, was Mary G. Ludwig Hopper. He had eight children (two daughters and six sons): Thomas T. Hopper ran the family society "Isaac Hopper & Son Inc." when Isaac Hopper was nominated Superintendent; the daughter Margaret was dangerous ill in 1904. We know he loved horse racing and he built a race track on his Florida Estate to organize and watch races. He was an amateur of yachting and in 1904, returning from a boat trip in Long Island with other members of the Tammany Hall Club, he had a wreck and almost drowned (CHA-IH-169). In 1910 he became seriously ill with cardiac issues (New York Times, May 25th, 1910) and after the second marriage, he died on December 22nd, 1912 and was buried in the Hopper-Wing-VanClave mausoleum in St. Raymond's Cemetery, Bronx, New York.

Scope and Contents of Collection:

The Isaac A. Hopper Scrapbook is an album of collected clippings of city, local and regional newspapers articles, about Isaac A. Hopper's life, activities, construction and political career from 1893 to 1905, during the most intense working period of his life. Clippings are glued to the thin pages of the album, and with the exception of the silk flier of the show "The Fortune Teller" at the West End Theatre in 1904, are the only type of document we find inside. Most of the articles are labeled with the date and the newspaper's name, and sometimes the name of Isaac Hopper is underlined with a blue or red pencil when it occurred in the clippings. The handwriting is always the same, and it's probably Isaac Hopper's hand, as a signed note reveals (CHA-IH-185).

The articles give an overview on Isaac Hopper's life and political career, but of interest are the iconographic series: newspapers photos of Isaac Hopper and other public personalities of that time, cartoons depicting the political scenario, sketches of some of his buildings.

Inclusive dates are 1891-1928, but the majority of the articles are from 1894-1906, during the political adventure of Isaac Hopper, and only a few rare clippings pass the first five years of the century. The album is in chronological order, but the order is not strictly respected: some pages include articles pertaining to an argument that spans many different years; and random articles were glued where a space in the page has/had been found, with no regard to the chronological or argument order.

Organization and Arrangement:

The clippings collection includes more than 500 articles, glued on 225 pages. This finding aid tries to provide access to all of these articles. A general topic, explaining the content of each page, has been chosen to act as a guide to the collection. Topics are identified by short and clear titles, and refer to the articles in the page, but not every page consists of only one topic, and it's possible to find articles that are not strictly related to the general topic chosen. Sometimes a brief description of the most interesting article on the page follows the topic and could give further information.

Topics give an overview of the Isaac A. Hopper Scrapbook, and we have divided the whole collection into four macro-areas (Private Business, Social and Public Life, Superintendent of Buildings, Private Life):

Private Business – Related to Isaac Hopper's activities as a contractor of public tenders, owner of the construction company "Isaac Hopper & Son Co.", banker and entrepreneur in general:

- Construction activities - Schemas with different tenders for the City of New York, with dates, prices, and contractors; articles about projects and contracts won by Isaac Hopper for railroads and infrastructures.
- Third Avenue Bridge - Articles about the long and troubled construction history of the Third Avenue Bridge, starting with the demolition of the old Macomb's Dam Bridge, through the difficult acquisition of the land on the north side of the river, and the relationships with his employees.
- Savings Bank - Articles about the "Twelfth Ward Saving Banks," later renamed "Empire Savings Bank", "Hamilton Bank", "".

Social and Public Life - Topics about the public life of Isaac Hopper, his political career, his participation in the New York democratic clubs, and his role in the Harlem society:

- Political life - General topic about different political episodes, not strictly involving Isaac Hopper.
- Club life - Articles about meetings, festivals, nights at New York's democratic clubs, such as "Tammany Hall", "Sagamore Club", "Harlem Democratic Club", "Occidental Club", and "Massasoit Club".
- Association of Builders - Articles about meetings and activities of the Associations of Builders, the "Builders and Trades Exchange," and other unions supported by Isaac Hopper.
- Board of Education - Articles about the activities of Isaac Hopper, until 1893, and his contributions to the Common School System Reform.
- Tammany Primaries (1899, 1903, 1904) - Numerous articles about the campaign for the Tammany Hall Primaries in the 31st district, the fight with the opposing rival, and the vote.

Superintendent of Buildings - About the designation of Isaac Hopper as Superintendent of the Building Bureau, his inspection activities, his new bills and the public reaction, until his resignation.

- Cravel Case - About a case of extortion by Mr. Cravel to "Isaac Hopper & Son Co." to prevent the calling of a strike.
- Darlington Disaster - About the fatal collapse of the Darlington Hotel in Manhattan.
- Elevator's affair - About the safety system bill proclaimed by Isaac Hopper and the polemics of the public opinion, charging him of complicity with the vendors.
- Resignation request - The strong newspaper campaign against Isaac Hopper (ended with the charge of adultery with a young actress).

Private life:

- Florida Estate - About the family residence in Orlando, Florida "The Ripples" on Lake Sue, where Isaac Hopper managed pineapple and orange cultivation, and had a horse racing track.
- Horses races - About the races and Isaac Hopper's horses.
- Biographies and Personal life - Articles with short biographies of Isaac Hopper and interesting episodes of his life.

Provenance:

When Carnegie Hall established its first archives, in August 1986, the press department sent releases to the media to generate interest in the project. The first article to appear in the press was on August 12, 1986 in the Long Island newspaper, New York Nowdays. Written by Peter Goodman entitled "Preserving Carnegie Hall's History, the article generated many phone calls and letters from the public. One of the first people to contact Carnegie Hall was Patricia Hopper Strasberg, living in Old Field, NY. She identifies her great grandfather, Isaac A. Hopper, as the original contractor of Carnegie Hall, and that she owned a scrapbook of material. A meeting was arranged within the month and it was agreed the scrapbook would be put on long-term deposit at Carnegie Hall.

Gino Francesconi has stayed in touch with Patricia Strasberg via emails and gatherings on the occasion of the Strasberg's visits to New York. Patricia and her husband, Ron, currently reside in Orlando, Florida.

During the remodeling of the studio tower, 2009-2014, it was discovered one of the Tishman Construction managers was named Mike Hopper. A meeting was arranged to determinate a relationship if any. To this date none has been determined. In April 2017, Patricia Stresberg was asked for permission to digitize the scrapbook and photographs with the promise that a finding aid and digitized files would be shared with the Strasberg family. Permission was granted

Every relative of the principal branch of Hopper family is described, with detailed dates –born, death, marriage and reference to the spouse parents- and a brief biography reporting the residency, the job and the place of sepulture.

- Hopper's Family Tree:

The Family tree was created by Patricia Hopper Strasberg in 1977, and shows the principal patrilineal branch of the family, from the forefather in Holland Willem Hoppe, to the ancestor couple that moved to America in seventieth century (Andries Hopper and Geertie Hendrickje Steinmets) and the eleven generations of Americans born during the following three centuries, from 1625 to 1961.

List of buildings:

Isaac Hopper had been in the construction field for over 30 years, and during his career he built more than 50 buildings all around New York City, New York State and in Florida. Featured are some remarkable ones such as Carnegie Hall, now a national landmark. A lot of his works are now destroyed and replaced by new buildings, but we can still find a large number of them, sometimes with the same function as originally intended. His activities started in the Bronx with a building for the mounted police of Morrisania (Bronx, NY) and his career took off very quickly. He worked a lot on private contracts, and his first contracts were with family Mausoleums in the Trinity Cemetery in Manhattan (despite New York City's constantly changing skyline, these mausoleums are still standing). "Isaac A. Hopper & Sons Incorporated Building Construction" also had important public contracts, like the foundation of the Costume House, the Third Avenue Bridge, the Parkway Viaduct System, and the Eighth Regiment Armory.

His activity ranges from office buildings to churches—such as the Saint Michael Episcopal Church in Harlem, which still operates today—and includes a variety of typologies: hospitals; infrastructures, especially the Third Avenue Bridge, a work of high-tech engineering for that time, and some railroad systems with modern Power Cable Houses; commercial buildings; hotels and residences; schools, which earned him a position on the Board of Education; banks; cultural institutions and monuments, such as the Tower of Victory in Washington Headquarters' Square in Newburgh, NY; libraries, such as the Lenox Library (which was later destroyed and combined with the New York Public Library Collection), and the Carnegie Library in the Upper East Side (now the Yorkville branch of the NYPL). After his death the construction company was managed by his son, Thomas Tone Hopper, affiliated with his father firm, and then by the brothers Walter Francis and George Burford until 1932.

Here is a list of his works as outlined in the scrapbook, with the address, the date of construction (if known), and the date of demolition (if applicable), divided by architectural typology. The main sources of this list are the biographical clippings in the scrapbook:
